R.A.F. Hits Berlin and Other Spots

Center of German Capital Is Raided in Night; Hamburg, Hanover Also Attacked
Nazis Are Halted
Russians Claim Nazi Forces, Air Raids Are Stymied

(By The Associated Press)
Huge R. A. F. bombers dropped some of Britain's "heaviest and most powerful" bombs in the heart of Berlin last night, the British air ministry news service reported today.

"There was no doubt about where they had fallen," the news service declared. "Huge flashes were right in the center of the city."

It said the British raiders circled over the German capital and illuminated their targets by dropping flares.

It claimed equal success in the R. A. F.'s night bombing of Hamburg and Hanover in attacks from which, the air ministry announced, nine British bombers have not returned.

The main weight of the air attacks was concentrated on Hanover and Hamburg, the communiqué said, and a "small force of four-engined bombers attacked objectives in Berlin." British fighter planes, meanwhile, were making still another series of raids on air bases in occupied France, it added.

Informed sources declined to say whether the four-engined bombers were American-built Boeing flying fortresses but it was noted that Britain's own Halifaxes and Stirlings are equipped also for long-range, high-altitude attacks.

One R. A. F. captain was quoted as saying Berlin anti-aircraft batteries at first attempted to fool the raiders by giving no sign of their existence.

But as soon as the planes arrived over the capital and British bombs began falling, he said, the defense batteries opened fire "since it was no longer any use for them to pretend Berlin wasn't just below us."

"We had flown through storms and above clouds on the way out but there were no clouds over Germany," he related. "We passed through two vast belts of searchlights before we reached Berlin."

"They looked brighter than ever on so dark a night—and so did the flashes of our bombs in the center of the city."

Nazis' Attacks Weaker
The Russians reported today that Moscow came unscathed through its fifth successive night of dwindling air attacks and declared the Nazi land assault still was stymied in the last day of its fifth week.

No bombings whatever were reported in last night's Moscow raid, which caused an early evening alarm lasting an hour and 15 minutes.

A Russian communiqué declared today the German drives still were being staved off in the central and southern sectors, with the Nazi forces suffering heavy losses.

The Moscow communiqué reported "continued stubborn fighting" in the Polotsk-Nevel and Smolensk sector and near Zhito-mir.

The communiqué reported 45 German planes downed Thursday and said the Red air fleet was pounding relentlessly at Germans on the battlefield and behind the lines.

In Berlin authorized sources said today Germany at present has no comment on the American freezing of Japanese assets.

"Any comment must await the official Japanese attitude," the spokesman said.

Big Question Is Whether Japan Will Take Indies

He traveled incognito, listed expenses at $30.30, exclusive of telegrams to his wife.

Hague Gives Edison Democratic Reins During Their Feud

Governor Says, However, Hague Has No Right to Give Something People Own

Jersey City, N. J., July 26 (AP)—Mayor Frank Hague has handed the leadership of the Democratic party in New Jersey to Governor Charles Edison so that "the people may be able to judge impartially" their feud over a railroad tax settlement.

"There must be no question of Edison versus Hague," he said in a statement announcing his bold action last night.

Edison promptly rejected the idea because, he said, "the mayor is presuming to give me something which is not within his power to give. That leadership is only within the gift of the Democratic voters and workers of the state."

Hague made clear that he was not abandoning political activity in his home stronghold of Hudson county, nor did he intend to relinquish the vice chairmanship of the National Democratic Committee. He has been acknowledged leader of the party in New Jersey for 25 years but does not hold an office in the state organization.

Hague said his action would compel Edison to face the people "and justify his complete repudiation" (Continued on Page 12)

Nipponese Could Secure Vital Resources to Lessen Dependence Economically

By DE WITT MACKENZIE (Freeman Special News Service)
The question of immediate moment revolving about Japan's occupation of French Indo-China is whether the Nipponese intend also to take over the riches of the Dutch East Indies, thereby securing vital resources which would greatly lessen her present dependence upon the United States and Great Britain.

Thailand (Siam) which lies up against French Indo-China at the top of the Malay peninsula, should provide us with a good barometer to measure the Japanese plans. If they should make a move to occupy Thailand also, then it will be clear that they are consolidating their military position for a drive in the Indies—an operation which would involve the knocking out of Britain's great naval base at Singapore.

The Japanese press claims that Tokyo was forced to occupy French Indo-China because British, French and American interests were planning to move on that country. And the Japanese foreign office has issued a statement calculated to inspire the belief that Nippon's sole purpose is to safeguard the colony's territorial integrity and protect both French and Japanese interests.

Significant Claim
However, the Japanese press also has been making the significant claim that the Allies have designs on Thailand too and that this country may need Japan's protection. Whether this newspaper talk is a build-up for further action remains to be seen. In any event, keep an eye on Thailand.

The quick action of the United States and Britain in placing heavy economic restrictions on Japan, and Tokyo's fear of a wholesale economic blockade, may have the effect of restraining the Nipponese from further moves towards the Indies at this juncture. It is no secret that Japan throughout her operations against China has lived in constant dread of the application of a trade embargo, which London experts now claim could bring Japanese industry to its knees in six months.

Position Is Bad
Japan's economic position already is very bad, owing largely to the drain of the war in China. Until she can open up new sources of supply she not only is dependent on America and the British Empire for necessities, especially those needed for the conduct of war, but the United States is her best customer as well. A trade blockade therefore certainly would constitute a great peril for Japan.

One would think that Tokyo now would consider it wise to sit tight for a time, to see how the European war progresses. If Germany makes a spurt and seems to be a certain winner, then Japan will be in position to take advantage of the situation. But if the Allies win, the Japanese don't want to get tangled up with the Allies.

Japan's move has the effect of drawing her further into Hitler's camp. This being so it looks as though Tokyo may have been influenced by the idea that the Nazis were about to knock Russia out and then race home with the European war. The surprising resistance by the Reds may be another item which will impel Japan to proceed with caution.

U.S. Leads Against Japan; London Sees Tokyo on Knees in 6 Months

Japanese Need Goods To Strike at East Indies

Other Nations Besides U. S., Britain Might Take Similar Action To Curb Drive to South

Washington, July 26 (AP)—The United States assumed the offensive in economic war against the Axis today by "freezing" all Japanese assets and providing machinery for tightening down drastically on exports which would be vitally needed by Japan for any aggressive move on Singapore or the Dutch East Indies.

President Roosevelt's executive order immobilizing more than $131,000,000 in Japanese funds and property, including that of some of an estimated 70,000 Japanese residents in American territory, was issued in full knowledge that Japan might take immediate retaliatory action.

Only a few hours after Mr. Roosevelt issued his order, Great Britain swung into a parallel course, freezing Japanese assets in the far-flung British empire. There were indications as well that other interested governments which were immediately notified—including the Netherlands and the Latin American republics—might act with the same objective.

The President's action was a quick counterstroke to Japan's move to assume military control in French Indo-China. Acting Secretary of State Welles had denounced Tokyo's step as a menace to peace in the Pacific and declared it endangered American territory (the Philippines) and adjacent areas on which the United States depends for many raw materials for national defense.

A retaliatory freezing order by Japan would immobilize an estimated $217,000,000 in American assets in the Japanese empire, an amount which would be materially increased if the Japanese-dominated governments of Manchukuo and Japanese-occupied China took similar action.

4,400 Americans in Area
An estimated 4,400 Americans, mostly Japanese born in the United States (including Hawaii), live in the Japanese empire, and a large number of the estimated 6,000 Americans still in China are in areas occupied by Japanese forces or under the jurisdiction of the "Peppet" government set up by the Japanese army at Nanking.

The President's freezing order also included all Chinese assets in American territory but a White House statement explained such action had been taken at the request of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, to keep Japan from benefiting from any Chinese-owned assets under American jurisdiction.

The treasury immediately issued a general license releasing assets under control of the Chinese government at Chungking (recognized by the United States) or the Bank in China, thereby making the order effective only against Japanese-controlled areas.

The order—which went into effect at the opening of business today—tied up Japanese assets in the continental United States, Hawaii, the Philippines and other American territories.

Treasury officials said that while Japanese ships in American ports or waters would be at least temporarily immobilized, a final decision would be made in the immediate future as to whether the vessels were "assets" under the order.

Maritime officials said four Japanese vessels were now in American waters and about 40 others flying the rising sun flag were hovering off the Pacific coast, hesitant to enter American ports until the question had been decided.

No Immediate Information
There was no immediate information available as to whether there were any American ships—which might be seized in retaliation—in Japanese ports or waters.

Japan already has in force severe exchange control, export control and other financial and economic measures which have greatly restricted utilization of American assets there and served as almost the equivalent of "freezing."

A White House statement said this nation's action was "designed among other things to prevent the use of the financial facilities of the United States and trade between Japan and the United States, in ways harmful to the national defense and American interest, to prevent the liquidation in the United States of assets obtained by duress or conquest, and to curb subversive activities in the United States."

The statement added that "this measure, in effect, brings all financial" (Continued on Page 12)

President's Order Upsets Japanese Business on Coast

Executive Order Freezing Assets Electrifies Big Firms; They Might Seek Permits

San Francisco, July 26 (AP)—San Francisco branches of Japan's greatest business firms feared they would be obliged to close their doors today as commerce between the United States and Japan virtually ceased.

President Roosevelt's order freezing Japanese assets in this country came as a smashing blow to this center of Japanese-American business. The order was received here while business houses were still open, and its effect was electric.

Japanese stood anxiously in long lines at bank windows during the day, withdrawing their funds in anticipation of the order. The Yokohama Specie Bank, which handles most of the country's Japanese-American finances, was swarming with near-panicky Nipponese.

Might Get Permits
One Japanese observer commented that business houses were hopeful of getting permits to carry on regular trade, "but they are all worried, most naturally."

Japanese ships in American ports headed to sea at full steam, and some 40 hovering offshore or marking time at sea gave no indication of their next move.

Movement of the 17,600-ton Tatuta Maru, carrying nearly 100 American citizens and a silk cargo valued at $2,500,000, remained a mystery. The fast liner, about 12 miles offshore since Thursday, has delayed her arrival for fear of seizure.

The Tatuta Maru sent word she would be in at 5 a. m. (P.S.T.) today, giving rise to speculation she had obtained some special permit from the State Department to land her passengers and cargo, and refuel and depart. Later, however, she messaged that she had been instructed by Tokyo not to dock here this morning. Whether she would enter port later was not known.

The huge new Japanese tanker Nishin Maru sailed from San Pedro at midnight with 95,000 barrels of oil, 20,000 short of capacity. This departure cleared west coast ports of Japanese ships.

General petroleum agents went aboard the ship during the loading in view of frozen credits, but any difficulty apparently was adjusted.

Will Oppose LaGuardia

New York, July 26 (AP)—Israel Amter, state chairman of the Communist party in New York, will oppose Fusionist Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and Democrat William O'Dwyer in the forthcoming New York city mayoralty campaign. Amter was chosen as the Communist candidate last night.

He was killed by explosion of a bomb placed in his hotel room. The former minister of the interior in Leon Blum's popular front government had taken a leading part in dissolution of the rightist "Action" organization, the Croix de Feu, and other nationalist organizations.

It was understood the bomb exploded in the middle of the night while Dormoy was sleeping. His room was on the first floor of the hotel overlooking a garden which is accessible from the street at all hours. The building is a roomy old roadhouse at the edge of the town, facing a lively, shopped square on the road to Marseille.

British Call Economic Act Only One Action in Offensive on Tokyo's Plans

London, July 26 (AP)—Economic experts suggested today that freezing of Japanese assets in the United States and the British empire was only one "weapon" in an economic arsenal that could bring Japanese industry to its knees in six months.

As British newspapers expressed satisfaction with the freezing action in retaliation for Japan's expected move on Indo-China, officials let it be known that a total blockade of Japan has been studied.

Occupation of Indo-China would increase Japanese stocks of rubber, tin, rice, tungsten, coal and zinc, but Britain and America could cripple Japan by cutting off her imports of iron ore, scrap iron, pig iron, copper, nickel, aluminum, manganese, vanadium, mercury, cotton and wool, experts declared.

Britain already has scaled down to relatively unimportant quantities most of her exports to Japan because of her own war needs. But with American and Dutch East Indies cooperation and British naval forces already in the Red Sea, Indian Ocean and the Atlantic, the blockade could be cheaply and quickly applied, it was held.

Large Supplies on Hand
It was conceded that Japan has large supplies on hand built up during two years of large-scale buying, but with 2,500,000 troops in the field, the world's third-largest navy, and an expanding air force to supply, it was believed she would feel the pinch of a blockade.

The Netherlands government was expected to join Britain and the United States in the freezing action, which would affect important Japanese trade with the Netherlands East Indies. An official statement said the government was in consultation with authorities in Batavia.

British sources called the joint action of the three governments historic, since it was against "a country which neither is a declared enemy nor occupied or controlled by a declared enemy." It was hailed as concrete proof that the policy of appeasement is completely dead.

Reuters, British news agency, in a dispatch from Singapore, said that "after months of continuous preparation, Malaya—and indeed the whole of the British, American, Chinese and Dutch East Indies front in the Far East—feel they are now ready to meet any situation with confidence."

Condition Serious
Isidore Siegel, 51, of Kerkonkson, was reported as still in a serious condition this morning in the Kingston Hospital. Siegel was found overcome by smoke in his apartment upstairs over the Pollock grocery store in Kerkonkson early Friday morning. Siegel was rescued by David Burrows, clerk in the Brown drug store, adjoining the grocery, who was awakened when heavy smoke filled his bedroom.

Planted Bomb Kills Dormoy Ex-Socialist Leader Is Assassinated at Montelmar; Was Leading Opponent of Nationalists

Vichy, Unoccupied France, July 26 (AP)—Marx Dormoy, Socialist leader in the French republic, was assassinated last night at the Hotel Relais de L'Empereur at Montelmar, where he had been detained.

He was killed by explosion of a bomb placed in his hotel room. The former minister of the interior in Leon Blum's popular front government had taken a leading part in dissolution of the rightist "Action" organization, the Croix de Feu, and other nationalist organizations.

It was understood the bomb exploded in the middle of the night while Dormoy was sleeping. His room was on the first floor of the hotel overlooking a garden which is accessible from the street at all hours. Suspension Times Are Announced

Anglo Treaty Is Out of Effect for Year, Two Others for Six Months

Some Firms Suffer
Otis Elevator, G-E, Cash Register, Banks Will Feel Act

Tokyo, July 26 (AP)—British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie informed the Japanese government today of Britain's intentions to abrogate all commercial treaties with Japan in an action parallel with United States freezing of Japanese assets.

At the same time, the Japanese government ordered the freezing of all United States assets in Japan.

Craigie was followed to the foreign office by U. S. Ambassador Joseph Grew.

Masutane Ogura, finance minister, told the press "the Japanese will take counter measures in an appropriate manner in keeping with the situation as necessary preparations have been completed."

The foreign office announced the British abrogation of commercial treaties after the British ambassador had called on Foreign Minister Teijiro Toyoda. Britain's step applied to commercial treaties involving India and Burma as well as the United Kingdom.

Length of Abrogation
The foreign office said the British treaty under its terms would be effective for a year after notice of abrogation, and the Indian and Burma treaties for six more months.

"Sir Robert Leslie Craigie called on Foreign Minister Toyoda at his official residence at 2:30 p. m. under instructions from his home government," said the announcement.

"Under instructions from his home government in letters written under July 26 date, Craigie notified Japan of Britain's intention to abrogate the commerce and navigation treaty concluded April 1934, the treaty concluded between Japan and India July 1934 regarding their trade relations, and the treaty of June, 1937, regarding trade relations between Japan and Burma."

"The ground was that the British, Indian and Burmese governments had reached the conclusion that the objectives they had at the time these treaties were signed no longer will be satisfied."

"In this connection it is recalled that the Anglo-Japanese commerce and navigation treaty is effective for one year after notification of abrogation, while the others will be effective in the coming six months."

In an oral statement to the press, Finance Minister Ogura said Japanese assets frozen in the United States were not large.

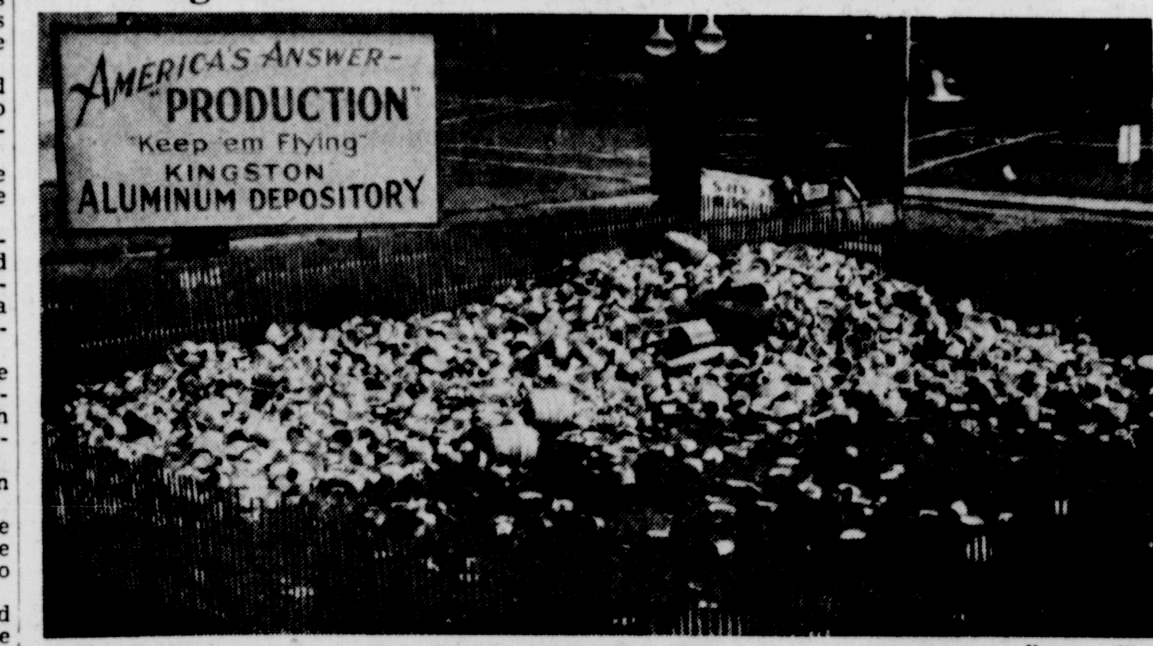

"Moreover trade between the United States has diminished steadily in recent months due to intensification of American restrictive measures. Therefore, the effect of the American action will be comparatively slight."

(A Domei broadcast said a selling wave swept over Japanese stock and raw silk markets. Tokyo Stock Exchange, the barometer of the market dropped seven yen, 60 sen, to 94 yen, 30 sen, the lowest in 10 years.)

(Domei said Japanese retaliatory freezing action involved nationals of the United States, United States territories and the Philippines commonwealth. The finance minister's permission will be needed henceforth for transactions involving the requirement or disposal of movable or immovable properties or securities of such nationals.)

(The news agency said the finance minister had an audience with the emperor this morning, and that the foreign minister also was received by the emperor after a conference of divisional chiefs to discuss the freezing of American assets.)

Naccarato, 16, of 295 First avenue, was arrested last night charged with operating a car without having an operator's permit. Mark Goldfarb of 20 Green street was arrested on a charge of operating a car while his driving license was suspended. The case was set down for a hearing later. George F. Financial and Commercial

New York, July 26 (AP)—The stock market today kept its feet on the ground in the face of the latest international shift involving an assets "freezing" war between the United States and Britain in one hand and Japan on the other.

While many leaders failed to do anything marketwise, an assortment of specialists shot up as much as 2 points or so, some to new highs for the year. Issues of rayon companies, which supposedly benefit from cessation of silk imports, were particularly favored.

There were slow intervals but

British Abrogate Commercial Pacts

seemingly were blocked from further business in Japan.

The President line already is using a skeleton staff, since the line's ships have been skipping Japan for several months. Several other United States firms such as Eastman Kodak and Westinghouse have been operated in Japan on a limited basis with the international settlement at Shanghai as their headquarters.

Domestic charges that the United States freezing action, following announcement of an agreement with France for joint defense of Indo-China, was designed to check Japan's "construction of a new order in East Asia."

The agency said the government had the power to cope with any situation which may develop and that "grave" reactions in trade with almost all countries not yet involved in the war seemed likely from President Roosevelt's action. The foreign office announcement that Japan had undertaken with France the joint defense of Indo-China declared the colony's territorial integrity would be respected and asserted the move was necessary to protect both Japanese and French interests.

The foreign office pointed out that Indo-China is an important source of materials for the industries of Japan, and that she could not let this source be imperilled. "Internal conditions in Indo-China recently have been greatly affected by the changes of the situations in Europe and East Asia, and the increasing signs that even the security of Indo-China would be threatened if such developments were left alone," the statement said.

Japanese newspapers had charged earlier that British, French and American interests were planning to move on Indo-China.

American circles at Shanghai said Japan probably would occupy the international settlement and the French concession, the principal parts of the city which, out of deference to extraterritorial rights of occidental powers, had been left unoccupied when the Japanese invasion of China enveloped Shanghai.

The French concession and the international settlement were likely to be yielded without resistance. The first is under the administration of the Vichy government whose capitulation to the Japanese plan of "joint defense" of French Indo-China was followed by the economic counter-steps of the British and Americans against Japan.

The international settlement is virtually undefended and indefensible against the thousands of Japanese already in Japanese-controlled parts of the city. The settlement is garrisoned by the fourth regiment of United States Marines and has a corps of lightly armed volunteers whose functions have been of a police nature. Japan was held likely to take over the third power areas through the Tokyo-sponsored Nanking government for China which has long threatened to abolish foreign holdings.

volumes of around 300,000 shares was one of the largest for a short session in more than two months.

The order of the President putting economic pressure on the Axis partner in the Pacific, as a result of the move on Indo-China, was thought to have been pretty well discounted in yesterday's proceedings when prices slipped moderately on average.

Wall Street, of course, realized that a huge amount of business with Nippon would go overboard but it was pointed out that numerous American corporations now have their hands full creating supplies for domestic and allied requirements. The industrial picture at home continued sufficiently bright, it was added, to bring further buying support for selected stocks.

Most commodity markets were closed for the usual week-end holiday and, consequently, there were no silk quotations. Cotton, though, after slipping at the opening on thoughts of a shut-down in Far Eastern exports, soon recovered. The comeback was credited partly to the Senate's approval of action to freeze government cotton loan stocks. Gains were narrow.

Japanese dollar loans again slumped in the bond department on a few sales.

Shares in new territory for 1941 included Industrial Rayon, Celanese, Burlington Mills and Schenley. Others up most of the time were Rayonier, Savage Arms, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Patino Mines, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Crucible, Steel, Youngstown Sheet, U. S. Rubber, American Airlines, Western Union, Chesapeake and Ohio and Chrysler.

Off occasionally were Montgomery Ward, Pepsi-Cola, Texas Corp., Consolidated Edison, American Can, Kennecott and International Harvester.

People of City Asked To Bring in Aluminum

Householders of Kingston who desire to contribute used aluminum to the drive now in progress are asked to bring it to the central depository at Broadway and West 9th street, or get in touch with the alderman for their ward, who will see that it is collected.

The Ulster county defense council and the Dutchess county defense council have selected Kingston as the concentration point to which they will ship the aluminum collected in the drive. The concentration depository is located on the Phelan & Cahill property, adjoining the David Gill warehouse, on East Strand, where the ground has been fenced in by employees of the public works board.

Kingston is one of the 12 cities in the state that have been designated as concentration points where aluminum is to be shipped.

FASHIONS AND HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

A View of Fashions From the Bald-Headed Row

By RAY PEACOCK

AP Feature Service Writer

New York—The question, dear Brutus, is not whether passemmenterie will be used this fall, nor whether godets are out and spiral pelum is in.

It's a great deal simpler than that, chum. The question is this: How much is going to show?

I am speaking, Brutus, of women's fashions. And my point is that women's fashions have come out in the open. Don't stop to try to figure out a double meaning on that one, chum. I can be more subtle than that.

If I would be subtle, in speaking of women's fashions, I would not say what kind of fashions I meant, because they are that kind of fashions. I mean, if I would say what they are, I would say something else, but it would mean what you and I both were thinking about. I trust that is clear, but very likely, Brutus, you will be able to find a double meaning this time.

Oh, the Grammar of It!

No. To be explicit, Brutus, today we have what are known as "naked fashions," and that means just what it says.

Leave us consider first. Brutus, the dollar-and-twenty-six-cent words which the fashion smarties have re-defined to accompany this off-trend in women's clothes.

We have, for instance, the "bare midriff." Cute, isn't it? Completely clear. "Midriff" is ever so much more elegant than "belly."

But as nifty as is that one, Brutus, the "plunging neckline" has got it beat. That's tops. Think of all the blushes that the phrase has saved. Think how long it's been since you have seen a blush of any kind, for that matter.

And do you know, Brutus, how a gal can make over her old dress or blouse to give it a plunging neckline? Simple as the name itself, chum. Where she used three buttons, she would now use one.

There are a couple more names for stylish nakedness we may tarry over, Brutus. Like "off the shoulder" blouses, "strapless" gowns and bathing suits, "slit skirts," a teaser color called "shocking pink," and "nude net," stuck here and there to make a dress more interesting.

There's a Reason—ONE Reason

Some people, Brutus, have gone to a snag of trouble trying to find reasons for this way-down-to-here business. They speak solemnly of the war, the mighty forces now at work, and the shortage of silks and satins.

Bologna, Brutus. When and for what other reason did women ever wear clothes of a certain style except that the men liked them?

And there you are, chum. I have made no attempt to prove anything; merely commented on the passing scene. And, man and boy, never has the passing scene been so pleasant to the eye.

Gloria's in Deep Water

By ADELAIDE KERR

AP Feature Service Writer

Gloria Callen just doesn't know what to do.

Of course she swims—well enough to hold the national outdoor backstroke championship, but a girl doesn't expect to find a life-long career in a swimming pool.

And it's a career that is on 17-year-old Gloria's mind. Between hours of strenuous training for the defense of her title in mid-August, she is considering three careers:

First, the movies. (One Hollywood company has already screen-tested her and another has asked to do so.) Second, newspaper work. Third, and nearest her heart, is radio.

"I'd love to be a topflight radio announcer," she told me as she sat by my desk the other morning, twirling a West Point button that swung from a fine gold chain are contesting for a No. 1. Gloria is a sturdy "perfect 36" with hazel eyes, chestnut hair and a warm smile. She is friendly, natural and unspoiled. As she sat by my desk, wearing a smart brown and white sports frock and a lemon yellow coat, she seemed completely unaware that a lot of interested males were making a lot of extra-curricular trips past her chair.

"I get a big kick out of the meets," she was saying. "And it's a lot of fun to win. But the biggest thrill is traveling. I've been to the West Coast three times, to the Canadian Rockies and the Midwest. And I've met such interesting people—Grantland Rice, Eleanor Holm, Glenda Farrell and a lot of others. I used to be shy and this has helped me a lot.

"But as soon as the next meet is over I'm going to concentrate on the question of my career. I just have one more year of high school and I have to make up my mind. Marriage? Well, not right away. Anyway I think a girl should be able to have both marriage and a career."

Avocado Test

Use this test to discover whether avocados are ripe enough to eat: Take the fruit in the palm of the hand and press very gently with the whole hand. If the flesh yields slightly, the avocado is ready. Avoid poking or pinching the fruit in different places as this causes bruises which bring on decay even before the fruit is ripe enough to serve.

THIS WEEK'S PICNIC POINTER

A special fuel basket containing materials for starting a fire can speed up picnic cooking.

Keep the basket, or box, filled with newspapers, kindling, six pieces of wood and a covered tin of matches. When the picnic call comes, grab the basket—and the food—and be away.

Start the fire with the contents of the basket and let the picnickers scout about for fuel to keep the fire going.

Since some outdoor cooks want an iron grate, you might include one and some long-handled forks.

ORNAMENTAL VINE

Sweet potato vines are very dainty and add a bit of delicate greenery to a porch, terrace or living room. Stick a sweet potato in a jar, with about an inch of the top showing. Fill with water. Keep in the light and delicate green leaves will sprout and soon form a graceful vine. Keep the jar filled with water.

FINGER FOOD

Here is a good finger food for summer serving: Scoop out insides of large sized rolls, spread with butter and chill until time needed, then heap up with tuna, or chicken or veal salad. With hot coffee or ice tea, a fruit or berry dessert, you have ample food for supper for family or guests who drop in.

The New Coats

By AMY PORTER

AP Fashion Editor

New curves and angles, new twists and turns, give fur coats for this coming fall entirely new structural lines.

Easier fit and greater slenderness are two paradoxical characteristics of both swagger and fitted types. Waist and shoulders are roomier. There's more bulk above the waist, less below—adding up somehow to a look of greater slenderness.

Point by point, here are the style trends you'll note in the new August offerings:

Important shoulders. Football biceps are out; smooth flowing lines are in. The "natural" shoulder isn't natural at all. It still is well-padded and about as broad as it was last year. But it has a smooth line instead of a jut-up at the other edge.

Important sleeves. Bigger, softer sleeves are the order of the day. The semi-dolman sleeve, with an armhole ending midway between waist and armpit, is more popular than the much-touted full dolman, reaching clear to the waistline. Conservative coats achieve somewhat the same raglan effect with deep-cut, but not dolman, armholes. Cuffs, sometimes very wide and flared, give newness to sports styles. High style coats sponsor surprise sleeves in dressy black furs—three-tier sleeves, one tier growing out of another, as on a tiered skirt; short, bell-shaped sleeves, ending half way between elbow and wrist; and puffy melon-shaped sleeves made of swirling strips of fur.

New silhouettes. This season's fitted coat bears little resemblance to last season's princess-liner. The trend is to an easy straight line, away from flared skirts and wasp waists. More fullness above the waist is often achieved with the semi-dolman sleeves. Skirt fullness is generally confined to the front, with back and sides kept smooth and flat. Swagger coats, too, hang straighter, with less back ruffle.

The most radical silhouette of Fluffy fur jackets fit into the trend toward bulkiness above the waistline. In fluffy black and white American skunk, they sell at $150 to $250.

all, seen only occasionally is much narrower than the shouldered. The hemline actually is ders.

Good Taste Today

By Emily Post

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personality of a House," "The Book of Social Usage," etc.)

Whether the Bride Walks Alone Depends on the Appearance She Makes.

The question of whether the bride may properly walk up the aisle of the church alone, depends not so much on the size of the church or the number of people, as the appearance she makes. If she has what is known as presence, and if her dress is effective, as well as long, she can carry off the essential picture alone. If she holds herself badly and her dress has no style, her appearance alone may be very flat.

It is hard, therefore, to know how to answer the bride who explains: "Having no man relatives and no family friends to whom I feel near enough to want to ask this favor, do you think it better to dispense with my rather elaborate wedding plans? I wanted to have four ushers, four bridesmaids, a maid of honor and after this fairly long procession, I wondered whether I might not look like the leavings, walking all alone at the very end. Would train-bearers help? I would like to have this wedding, but not if it would make me an object of pity."

In answer, I must say that I have no way of knowing whether she would give an impression of satisfying loveliness or whether she might look almost as left-over, as she fears. The right dress for her personality is in this case very important. A severely simple dress if she is tall—a picture dress if she is little, and to add to the effectiveness of her appearance, I can at least advise that having two flower girls walk just ahead of her, and separated by an appreciable distance from her maid of honor will add greatly to the effectiveness of a bride who is small and possibly shy besides.

On the other hand, train-bearers would definitely detract from her appearance because a train held up, unavoidably gives a halting, impeding impression almost as though hobbled with a lariat. Train-bearers really require that a bride have an exceptionally sturdy father to cling to, to prevent absent-minded or temperamental young pages from throwing her off her feet!

Young Girls And Corsages

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it proper for very young girls to wear corsages to dances when these are sent by young boy friends or provided by their parents? "Young girls" means thirteen or fourteen years old.

Answer: They are really too young. Certainly too young to wear these flowers bought by their parents. If a boy should send a girl flowers, she might wear them rather than hurt his feelings. Otherwise late sixteen or already seventeen is as soon as any well brought up young girl begins to wear corsages.

You Can Teach Yourself To Do A Good Clean Dive

Simple Dive Easily Learned

What a job some swimmers make of that simple act—getting into the water. Shivers of apprehension, last looks around—and then the dive and belly flop!

You can teach yourself a simple dive that gets you into the water easily and pleasantly.

Stand on the side of the pool, swing arms forward and push hard with your toes, pushing yourself away from the side. Lower your head and arms and dive into the water a few feet from where you stood.

If you've firmly resolved to keep your head down and look at your feet, you will have avoided that trouble-making last look around.

As you dive make your body straight from finger-tip to toe. And keep your head and hands down until you're well under water. If you slap the surface it's because you lifted your head just as you reached water.

Other obstacles to good swimming yield as readily to a little "knowing how."

How to do the popular strokes is explained in our 32-page booklet. Gives diagrams and directions for the American Crawl and back crawl, trudgen, trudgen crawl, back stroke, breast stroke and side stroke. Tells how to dive, float, keep safe in the water. Has racing starts and turns.

Beauty and the Beach: 3

For Beautiful Hair — Pass the Salt (and Water)

AP Feature Service Writer

By BETTY CLARKE

If you just can't do anything with your hair in the good old summertime, maybe you don't pay enough attention to it. For hair takes an awful beating from summer sun and water—and needs special care to come through safely and softly.

Much of the hair problem disappears if you wear a cap while swimming, in the opinion of New York's leading woman hair stylist, Laura de Gez. Other hair experts agree with her.

If you swim in the ocean, it's this way: Without a cap you get salt water in your lovely locks; you hardly ever take time to rinse it out after you jump the waves. The result, Miss de Gez says, is salt which has a tendency to cake and dry on the scalp. Sometimes it even causes an acid reaction.

Even if you swim in fresh water, she says, you must rinse your hair, and well, after capless swimming.

If your hair is inclined to be dry anyhow, this hair stylist recommends that you take a brush to the beach and give your crowning glory some strong strokes. Then, and this is important if the ends are particularly dry, have an oil treatment, the kind that includes a rubbing in of oil and a steaming to get it really into your scalp. Once a month is enough.

After sunning, you should massage your scalp. A little cologne takes away the salty smell, but a lot of cologne may be too drying. Go light on bleaches and dyes in summer. They are drying. Switch to light rinses at least temporarily. If you are determined to have very casual coiffure by day, you can go in for lacquers for late parties. But you should wash or brush out the lacquers the morning after.

Summer Complaint No. 2

This is the summer silhouette that starts them talking. Some stylists actually say it's cute—and the men usually don't object. But the truth is that a slipless sheer isn't the thing for bright sunlight. The beach is the place for displaying the figure to this extreme.

Wife—What's the difference between learning to drive a car and learning to play golf?
Husband—Easy. When you're learning to play golf you don't hit anything.

Puffing and blowing the sailor just managed to pump into the motor bus as it was leaving the bus station.

Middle-Aged Man (in front seat, eyeing him with scorn)—When I was your age, my lad, I could run half a mile, catch a train by the skin of my teeth, and yet be as fresh as a daisy.
Sailor (gasp)—Yes, but I missed the bus at the last bus station.

We recently spied this verse on a limousine driven by a sheik:
"Looking for a place in the sun;
A place to park.
A place to park.
A place in the park.
A place in the dark.
A place to park my car."

Optimistic Pilot (to his scared passenger)—We shall crash, but don't worry. There's a rubber plantation down there.

Ex-Doughboy—The draft board put me in Class A and when I got to camp they registered me as a truck driver!

Alford—That boy Percy has his father's honesty.
Martin—Well, I always thought somebody had it.

Cross words, cross words—have you tackled any?
Many! That I have, sir; too damned many.
And tell me, do you find it sir, Worth the time you lose?
I hear a lot of funny words which I can never use.

Fogmore—But I asked you darling to keep our engagement a secret.
Sylvia—I couldn't help it, dear. That hateful Ethel said the reason I wasn't married was that no man had ever been fool enough to propose to me. So I told her you had.

HEARTBREAK HONEYMOON

Chapter 27
Henry Steps In

"Oh, stop trying to be epigrammatic, or whatever it is you call it," Marie said crossly. Then, searching Henry's face, "I suppose you'll rush down and beg Luella to come back to you."

"Why should I?"
"You'd be running true to form. I've always heard that you men always want your wives back the moment you think some other man finds them attractive."

"Stop it, Marie!" Henry said sharply.

"Goodness! You needn't bite my head off."

"Sorry," Henry got hold of himself. "Go on, forget about me hitting your head off, and bite that mutton chop!"

Marie brightened. "You're sweet Henry," she said. "I'm not going to lose my appetite over losing Tommy, so don't you lose yours because Luella's—er—gone with the wind."

"Not bad advice," said Henry. "I'll try to follow it."

He turned his attention to his own lunch, but without enthusiasm. How could a man be expected to sit down and eat a hearty meal when his wife had flown, and another man had flown after her?

Maybe it was true that men often had a hearty meal just before sitting down in the electric chair or climbing the stairs to the scaffold, but he wasn't hungry. His confused brain was too busy with jigsaw bits that went to make up memories of his life and Luella's.

Funny little snub-nosed brat, climbing a tree, and not being able to get down. "Don't stand there looking Henry," came up and get me. Luella covered with flour as she made her first batch of biscuits under her Aunt Lila's supervision, and himself standing in the doorway rocking with laughter. The Sunday School picnic. . . The hay-rides. . . The times the old gang would gather in the Corner Drug Store for ice cream, and dance to the tune of a mechanical piano.

"Well," said Marie.

"Well, what?" Henry said vaguely, turning back to face her. "I must say I've had gayer luncheon companions."

"I don't doubt it, Marie. Sorry. Forgive me."

Marie reached over, caught one of his hands, squeezed it.

"Of course you're forgiven!" she said. "Come on, darling, let's eat, drink, and be cheery!"

"Not a bad idea!" said Henry. But when the lunch was over, and he had said goodbye to Marie, Henry hurried into the nearest telephone office. There he snatched up a blank and wrote a message. It was to Luella Pell, in Florida, bearing the address of Tommy McIntyre's cottage.

It said: "Take no definite steps until I see you. Am leaving Wednesday night."

Racing The Storm
TOMMY MCINTYRE pressed his toe down a bit harder on the accelerator, thus raking arrest for speeding. But he was in a hurry—a big hurry. Four days had passed since he had left New York, and he should have been in Florida before this.

And now, at last, he was on the final lap of his trip. Florida and Luella!

A drop of rain splattered against the windshield. Then another, and another. Tommy looked up quickly. He didn't like the appearance of the clouds he saw, not a bit. He then glanced at the gasoline gauge. Getting pretty low. Better get the car serviced at the next filling station he saw. There was one about two miles further on. He pulled up in front of it.

"Fill her up, please!" he said to the attendant.

"Yes, sir!"
"Better have a look at the oil, too. And the air."

"Yes, sir!"
More rain-drops began to fall. The wind had risen. The world seemed to take on a strange and weird aspect. The sun completely wiped out, a greenish color spreading over the heavens.

"Looks bad," said Tommy.

"Yes, sir, it sure does," said the attendant. He turned from filling the gas tank to have a look at the oil.

"Reminds me sort of the way things looked just before that storm we had a few years ago. I reckon you read about it."

"Don't talk like that!" said Tommy. "You give me the jitters. I want to make Miami before night."

"I reckon you can do that, all right, if you drive fast. The storm's going to be back of you, and you ought to beat it to town."

Tommy paid the bill, tipped the boy generously, and was off, driving faster than he had ever driven before. The rain was coming down hard now, and the wind was doing all sorts of fantastic things to the trees and shrubbery.

He bent low over the wheel, his eyes on the fan-shaped spot the windshield wiper made. He must get to Luella before the storm grew any worse. These southern storms could be pretty frightening things at times. He knew. He had been in them before.

The car shot forward like a mechanical animal, racing on and on through a veritable wall of rain.

But no matter how much speed Tommy forced into the rocking, swaying roadster, the storm swept on past him. It roared into Miami, smashed windows, uprooted trees, overturned automobiles and trolley cars, played horrible tricks on humans and animals alike, crushed bungalows and bath houses. And not content with this, it rushed on along the beach, blasting sand dunes, tearing up the trailer palms, bending almost flat the more sturdy ones, and lashing the ocean into a black and roaring rage. On and on, wailing, sobbing, whistling.

Terror
LUELLA PELL was standing in the living room of Tommy McIntyre's cottage, wild-eyed with terror. She had pushed the heavier pieces of furniture against the doors, and closed tight all the windows. But it seemed useless. It seemed to her that the wind would blow in the windows as though they were made of tissue, and sooner or later tear the doors from their hinges.

Then, suddenly she heard a new noise. She uncovered her ears, and listened, tense, curious. There it was again! A knocking. A pounding at the door. And a voice calling, high above the storm. Oh, thank God, a voice! She ran forward, stumbling over a rug, striking her knee against a chair.

"Just a minute!" she cried. The door swung in as though it had been blown open by a blast of dynamite. She staggered back, gasping before the wind and rain that beat upon her.

"Quick, give me a hand!" someone commanded.

Luella brushed the water from her eyes.

Tommy? she cried. She ran to his side. She pushed, struggled, helped him to force the door shut again. She helped him re-plate the furniture against it. And then, wet, bedraggled, she turned to look up into the face of a Tommy who was even more wet and bedraggled than she was.

"Luella—Luella," Tommy said softly. "Thank God, I got here!"

He reached out for her, drew her unresisting into his arms. "You poor little thing—here all alone."

Luella began to sob brokenly. "It's been going on for hours, Tommy," she wailed. "It's been terrible. . . I've seen two cottages swept out to sea. . . I've seen—"

There, there, Tommy soothed. He held her tight against him, unmindful of his water-soaked clothing. "Tommy's here with you now."

"Tommy, look!" Luella interrupted sharply. "Water—coming in under the door!"

The cottage moved again, this time with a sudden lurch as though the foundation had given away entirely. Tommy held Luella closer for a moment, staring fascinated at the water that crept along the floor, toying with the legs of a table, coming nearer and nearer to Luella's heels.

"Come on!" he said. "We'll get up on the roof!"

"No, Tommy, no—we'll—"

Tommy didn't wait for her to finish. He picked her up, carried her out to the rear porch.

"It's not so windy back here," he said, raising his voice in order to be heard above the roar of the wind and the rain and the surf. "Here stand on! Here stand!" he directed. "Hold tight, while I climb up."

Then, somehow, Tommy got her up beside him upon the roof. They sat huddled together, close to a small dormer window that had some slight protection from the storm sweeping in from the ocean.

The cottage was now completely surrounded by water. It seemed to be floating. Those crawling fingers of the angry sea, wet and clutching, had found their prey.

Luella tried to smile. "Tommy, aren't you see—Henry last?"

"On Saturday," Tommy replied. "But let's not talk about him. He and Marie have done enough to you."

There was a roar. It started in the distance, grew and grew in volume. It came near and nearer. Tommy raised his head to look over the ridge of the roof toward the ocean. He saw a great wall of water sweeping toward them, a wall of water that rose higher and higher. He crouched down again, holding Luella to him.

"Darling," he called, "no matter what happens, always remember I love you."

"Please, Tommy, you mustn't," said Luella. Then she screamed. "Tommy, Tommy, the cottage! It's going—it's going! . . . Oh, Tommy—"

There was a crash, a great engulfing deluge of water. Luella closed her eyes. She felt herself being lifted, being tossed far, far out into space. And then darkness—a darkness that caught her, pulled her down, down, down. . .

La Traviata Given In Modern Manner

To those who are familiar with and enjoy opera, the presentation of "La Traviata" this week-end at the Ernest Williams Band Camp, Pine Grove, Saugerties, will prove a treat. To those who are unfamiliar with this form of music, it will provide a new inviting source of entertainment. The opera will be repeated this evening at 9 o'clock.

The entire production retains all of Verdi's vigorous melodies but is presented in English and with modern costumes and sets. The symphony orchestra accompanied and is composed of students whose average age is 17. This is also the average age of the chorus.

Lorraine Johnston as Violetta portrays a beautiful Parisian courtesan suffering from tuberculosis. The gaiety of her life, as well as the pathos in the second and third acts, was reflected in her voice. The handsome, young Alfredo Germont, tenor, Robert Dike, sang with tender emotional qualities. Both of these singers were complemented by the smooth flowing rich baritone of Donald Moore as Germont, Alfredo's father.

The story opens in the drawing-room of Violetta's house with a gay party in progress. The coloring of the set showed a harmony in reds from the light burgundy drapes, through the tall red tapers, bowl bouquets of red gladioli, to the red wine in the glasses. This was the scene of the famous "Drinking Song." Alfredo declares his love for Violetta and begs her to give up her way of living.

In the second act the audience finds the couple living together in a country home. The action took place on the stone terrace and the set was particularly fine for its perspective out across the garden to the hills. The third act setting is a modern boudoir.

Mention should be made of the tonal quality of Annina, the maid, sung by Irene Wassermann, a 14-year-old girl who has had some six years of junior choir work with Cecile Jacobson, who produced the opera. Perhaps the most effective part of last evening's performance was the scene between Alfredo's father and Violetta when he pleads with her to leave his son. The orchestra with the cast and chorus ably responded to the directing of Dr. Ernest S. Williams. The dancing of the Spanish Classic Hota in the second act was executed by Miss Helen Schwanda of the Jeanette Pruyn Reed School of Dance.

The complete cast follows:
Violetta Valery Lorraine Johnston
Alfredo Germont Robert Dike
Germont, his father Donald Moore
Gaston Frank Faucette
Flora Mabel Jones
Annina Irene Wassermann

Doll House Is Miniature Castle

One week from next Wednesday, August 6, will be opening day for the exhibition of Colleen Moore's Doll House. A prelude party will be held the evening before. All proceeds are for the local Bundles for Britain committee.

The doll house is in the form of a miniature castle with numerous turrets and steeples with a treasure of gold, silver, ivory, bronze, and pearl in its delicate and charming patterns. Many of the familiar fairy tale characters are used in decorative murals and statues.

In the chapel room is a golden organ with over a hundred keys none of which are more than a sixteenth of an inch wide. It plays electrically by remote control. Another miniature perfection is the library with tiny volumes written especially for the doll house by such authors as Edna Ferber, Hendrick Van Loon, Irvin Cobb, Booth Tarkington, John Steinbeck, Willa Cather, Kathleen Norris, and Conna Doyle.

In addition to the exquisite interior decorations, the gardens contain, weeping willow trees and flowers. More fairyland characters may be seen in these gardens including Donald Duck, Minnie and Mickey Mouse, and the frog "who would awoing go."

This will be the first time the doll house has been exhibited in this section of the Hudson Valley. It will be shown at the Standard Furniture Co. store from August 6 to 13.

'High Tor' Scores Hit at Maverick

Maxwell Anderson's Play Is Beautifully Staged by Young Group

Maxwell Anderson's well known play, "High Tor" was given with amazing effect at the Maverick Theatre last night considering the limitations of the rustic summer theatre.

The play was beautifully staged and the work of the young people in the cast shows that they are going ahead with the season and giving their utmost to the careers they have chosen.

It certainly was the best offering to date for all-around comedy and the work of Joe Graham, Jack Woods and Griff Evans alone makes it worthwhile entertainment.

All in the cast carry through well, however, in that most difficult of all stage tasks; the combining of the real and the fantastic and to those who have special feeling for the tradition of the Hudson Valley region, this play has special meaning.

Griff Evans as Van Van Dorn most effectively gets across a philosophy which makes him interestingly stubborn in the face of a rapidly changing and mechanized age which threatens to tear his mountain from under him. His character is as strong as the rock on which he walks, however, and as it harkens back to the age of his Dutch ancestry, it is fitting that a bit of this age should come to life almost as through the force of his own strong will.

The high comedy comes when Art J. Biggs, played by Joe Graham, and Judge Skimmerhorn, played by Jack Woods, find themselves suspended over the edge of High Tor in the bucket of a power shovel. Few plays have better comedy than this and the "hang-over" is well handled by the two young men.

Margaret Phillips who brings the other age to life does it well and she gives her utmost to many of the more beautiful lines of the play. Michael Barrett, who doubles as Captain Asher and a state trooper, does both parts well and Don Haggerty, as one of "the little men in the big hats," does a smart bit of work to help along with the fantasy. Wade Dent also doubles as A. B. Skimmerhorn and Pieter, and is effective in both bit and the work of Marion Thompson is commendable as Judith, the modern girl who helps provide the love interest.

The play continues tonight and tomorrow night.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Well Aged
Vincennes, Ind.—Forty years ago Henry Barr of nearby Bruceville wanted a cold bottle of beer.

So he took a bottle, tied a string around the neck and let it down into his well. The string broke.

Workmen cleaning out the well the other day found the bottle. The beer still looked clear. Barr's wife put it on ice and said she'd write the brewers, still in business, to see if they wanted it for a souvenir.

No Sky Rocket?
Kansas City, Kas.—It's the parking problem again—only this time it's planes.

City dads leased the airport to the army and now there's no room for private planes. Hangar rent at nearby fields has doubled.

Navy-Minded
Crockett, Tex.—"My daughter," explained Farmer William A. Lockkey to a recruiting officer, "is a naval nurse. My sons are both in naval training. I'd like to enlist too."

Lockey, 53, was rejected because of his age.

Tearful Results
Green Bay, Wis.—A tear gas salesman who demonstrated his wares to law enforcement officials produced plenty of action but failed to get an order.

While showing a tear gas billy it discharged and fragments of the shell slightly wounded two men, including Sheriff Andrew Lom. A few minutes later a gas grenade discharged in the hand of an officer, who suffered severe burns.

Police Captain Clarence Grognet said local authorities were not interested in the salesman's products.

Speaking of Trouble
Fort Dodge, Ia.—Sign Painter Paul C. Speak was back at work today but a little dismayed by this chronology:

July 11—Ladder slipped under him, pitching him 15 feet to concrete sidewalk. Result: A badly sprained ankle.

July 21—While fireproofing a canvas a quantity of chemical blew into his eyes, blinding him temporarily.

Ankle still bandaged and eyes still sore, he then missed a broken electrical insulator tossed by a fellow workman. It opened an artery and required five stitches.

Now his wrist is bandaged.

Recs Rout Clowns Newburgh to Play Locals At Stadium Sunday Night

Visitors Make 7 Errors in Slow Night Game; Steffins Gives Four Hits to Win

The Recreations were given plenty of opportunities last night by the Montreal Clowns at municipal stadium and went out to win their second straight by the score of 10 to 2. The Clowns committed six costly errors which ruined the pitching stint of Harry Howell, who deserved a better fate. The Recs punched out 14 base hits.

Don Steffins, the newcomer to the hurling staff of the local club, made his debut and allowed only four hits, all singles. He would have had a shutout in his first start had it not been for errors by Tommy Maines and Andy Celuch. Another ancient rivalry will be revived Sunday night when the local tossers take on the Newburgh Recreations at the stadium. The Hilly City Club has won 11 out of 17 games so far this year. Next Wednesday night the famous Black Yankees will appear here. Billy Ostrom will hurl. The Brooklyn Dodgers Rookies will make a return visit to the stadium next Friday evening. All games start at 9 o'clock.

Two in First Frame
The wild and woolly ball game that resulted showed evidence of just that in the first inning when the Recs, on one hit by Eddie Sabo, crashed in with two runs. Two errors did the trick. Oscar Sager, the clown at first base, couldn't get his bearings on two plays, which put Howell in his first hot water.

In the third the Clowns made it 2-1 when Morris, who looked like a real ball player all the way, rapped a sizzler into left and went to second when Celuch threw out Weber. Schell led off with a fly to center but the clown at that position, couldn't get his bearings on the fly-chaser dropped the ball and Morris raced home.

After this "comedy of errors" continued, Howell got by Thomas and Maines to start the third. Bing Van Etten, who played first in the place of injured Billy Ostrom, slashed a long drive into right and scamped to third for a triple. Bing would have had a homer on his tremendous clout if the pill hadn't bounced up to the fielder on the track curb. Sabo's second bingle pushed in Van.

Celuch went to second when Franklin juggled his grounder and then made a wild toss to first as Sabo romped in. Another error on Tiano's grounder, a long triple to center by "Whitey" Kowalczyk and an infield single by Steffins completed the rally. Abe Masci ended the uprising when he popped to Weber at short. Five runs on three hits.

Three Solid Hits
Three more hits, all good drives by Thomas, Maines and Sabo gave the Recs another in the fourth. In the fifth Kowalczyk bounced a ball in front of the platter and beat it out for a single. An infield grounder and Masci's single to left scored Kowalczyk.

Howell went to work and despite some more lapses by his teammates, managed to get out of holes in the sixth and seventh. The Clowns pushed in their final in the eighth on hits by Weber and Schell and an error by Celuch who made a bad peg to Van Etten.

Kingston hit the two column figures in the last of the eighth. Van Etten's second hit and singles by Celuch and Tiano moved the first sacker across the pay-off plate with the run.

Steffins, although losing his control in the late innings, kept the Clowns in check all night. He fanned seven and had his slow ball stuff working to perfection. Don also showed himself as a good hitter by rapping out two singles. Howell, working against the odds as Charlie Neff did Wednesday, did his best with his mates kicking the ball around as if it were a hot potato.

Newburgh Here Sunday
Tony Donato or Jack McCormick will do the hurling for the Newburgh Recs tomorrow night. Donato pitched his club to a victory over Harlem Valley this week. Charlie Neff who hurled against the same club and was defeated due to some bad breaks, is scheduled to get the assignment against the Stevedores.

Schroeder Meets Bobby Riggs Today For Sea Bright Cup

Youngster Defeats Sabin in Five-Set Battle; Riggs Is Favored to Get Title

Sea Bright, N. J., July 26 (AP)—Ted Schroeder, the Jersey-born Californian, soon may have some singles trophies to add to the silversware he and Jack Kramer have been collecting in doubles competition.

The 20-year-old youngster became a star in his own right yesterday as he entered the championship round of Sea Bright's 54th grass court tournament by knocking out Wayne Sabin in a five-set battle. He also eliminated National Champion Don McNeill in the quarter-final round.

Today the hard-hitting caddy kid—he was born in Newark, N. J., and resided there until he was 10—tackles Bobby Riggs for the coveted Sea Bright bowl, and though few gave him more than an outside chance, there's little doubt that he's a comer.

40,000 Expected At Arlington Track

New Jockey to Be on Top Favorite Whirlaway

Chicago, July 26 (AP)—Whirlaway and a strange jockey awaited the call to the post today for the Arlington classic stakes.

A forecast of clear, warm weather gave promise of a fast track for the classic, expected to draw 40,000 spectators. Post time was 4:45 p. m. (EST).

Six others were named for the $60,000 race with the Calumet star a probable 1 to 6 favorite, but Whirlaway's old tendency to run wild at the stretch turn, plus the factor of carrying Albert Shelhamer instead of Eddie Arcaro, who rode him to the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont victories, created an element of uncertainty.

The Amazon, Orinoco and Panama Plata rivers of South America together drain an area of about 3,700,000 square miles.

Saugerties Beats Puerto Rican Stars In Night Game, 8-5

Winners Outbit but Take Contest; Saugerties Scores 5 in Fifth to Clinch Game

Although out hit, the Saugerties A. C. defeated the Puerto Rican Stars last night at Cantine Memorial Field by the score of 8 to 5. Eddie Wallace hurled the victory. Simonitis pitched the last couple of frames.

After both clubs pushed over a run in the first, the Cubans hoped on Wallace for two runs in the fourth. Saugerties "iced" the contest in the fifth with five runs.

Wallace retired from the mound in the seventh. Simonitis came in and checked the Cubans with two hits the rest of the way. While hurling good relief ball, Simonitis also took batting honors with three hits. Charlie Francello played short for Saugerties. His future with the Kingston Recreations is in doubt.

Cubans 100 202 000—5 12 0
Saugerties 100 052 00X—8 10 2
Batteries: Gonzales, Diaz and Pamos; Wallace, Simonitis and Knauer.

Sunday afternoon Saugerties will play Sidney. Next Thursday the Harlem Valley club from Wingdale will play the Saugerties club under the lights at the Memorial Field at 9:15 o'clock.

Midget Auto Races

Woodstock, July 26—Promoter Wilbur Bennett has announced the signing of several stars of the midget motor circuit for Sunday's opening card of races at the Woodstock Speedway. The program, scheduled for 3 o'clock, will consist of seven events with a 25-lap main feature. All races will be run off with reversed start with contestants handicapped on the basis of past performances and reputation.

Colonials Win Again

The Colonial Sweet Shop softball club pulled another one out of the fire last night to defeat the East Kingston Eagles by 11 to 10. Whalen and Bush formed the winning battery. Next Monday the Colonials will engage the New Paltz Normal Club at Forsyth Park in a "rubber" game. Then on Tuesday, the club will meet the Freeman Printers at the M.J.M. diamond.

Bob Grove Wins 300th Game as Boston Trims Tribe, 10-6; Yanks Blank Chicago

(By The Associated Press)
In the old days the Pittsburgh Pirates used to roll through the early season like a fast freight and then go into seclusion on a side-track at about this time of year.

Fiery Frankie Frisch, if he hasn't accomplished anything else, at least has turned the time-table around so the Pirates now park during the spring and go like lightning during the summer.

They're the hottest things in the National League right now and leaped into third place yesterday by humiliating the Brooklyn Dodgers in both games of a double-header, 8-4 and 8-2.

Braves Blank Cards

This might have been a mortal blow to Brooklyn's pennant ambitions except that the St. Louis Cardinals took this occasion to concede an 8-0 decision to the Boston Braves.

Pittsburgh's first victim was Whitlow Wyatt, who a few weeks ago was the leading pitcher in the National League. The Pirates pounced on Wyatt for four runs in the eighth to break a tie and send him to his fourth straight defeat.

A double by Vince DiMaggio with the bases loaded was the crusher. In the nightcap the Pirates took less than three innings to knock out Curt Davis, who had won six in a row for the Dodgers. They made 13 hits, six in the third inning.

These feats gave the Pirates seven straight victories and 21 in their past 29 contests, while extending the Dodgers' slump to seven defeats in 10 tilts.

The St. Louis setback last night was something of a shock in the way it was accomplished. The Braves scored all eight of their runs in the first two stanzas. Harry Gumbert, who was a brief sensation in June, started on the mound for the Cards and couldn't get anybody out.

The Braves belted him for three runs and then got five more in the next frame off Ira Hutchinson, three of them on Paul Waner's first home run of the year. Jim Tobin silenced the mighty St. Louis artillery on three hits.

The Phillies plopped Cincinnati, 4-3, to drop the Reds to fourth place and squeeze New York into the second division even though the Giants cuffed the Chicago Cubs, 5-2.

Grove Wins 300th
The New York Yankees continued to sweep through the American League, but the big thrill was Lefty Grove's feat in winning his 300th victory after two previous failures. He gave the Cleveland Indians a dozen hits, but the power of the Boston Red Sox pulled him through to a 10-6 triumph. Jim Tabor hit two home runs, Ted Williams one, and Jimmie Fox tripled with two on. This put the great southpaw in a class with 11 other hurlers in the history of the major leagues.

The Yankees bombed the Chicago White Sox for an 8-0 triumph behind the three-hit hurling of Spud Chandler and increased their first-place margin to 11 games. The Yanks' 13 hits included a pair of three-run homers by Tom Henrich and Charley Keller.

The surging Philadelphia Athletics won their fifth in a row and tied the Detroit Tigers to their eighth straight defeat, 11-5, with a 15-hit assault that was concentrated in a six-run inning when Frank Hayes singled with the bases loaded and Pete Suder tripled with two on.

Elden Auker's seven-hit pitching stopped the Washington Senators, 5-3, for the St. Louis Browns.

PGA Puts Yardstick to Professionals To Find Golf Teaching Tips for Dubs

By ROBERT GEIGER
AP Feature Service Writer

Denver—The Professional Golfers' Association used a yardstick on the games of the pro stars and came up with this tip for duffers: Try a narrower stance.

The PGA did some fact-finding at its annual tournament here the other day and discovered the professionals were using a narrower stance, keeping their feet much closer together in driving, than they did 10 years ago.

They say this stance enables a player to handle his weight more easily throughout the swing and he can get a full, freer turn of the body and put more "oomph" into his drives. Another result is that the swing as a whole is much more compact. In other words, more of a half or three-quarter swing, a la Craig Wood, the National Open champion.

Hope for Golf Dub

This is just one of the things the PGA found out in its campaign to take the games of star players apart and see what made them click.

This investigation is pretty important to Mr. Golf Dub. If the experiment is a success his golf instruction will be simplified substantially, and cut to his temperamental make-up.

He can be told exactly what combination of movements and postures produce the good shots, which ones put him in the rough, and there will be a yard stick by which his progress may be measured exactly.

The golf teachers know, of course that there are major points of stance and grip that make a good golfer but the present study goes much farther than that. It is concerned with the minor movements of hands, legs and arms and the build of a golfer. The coordination of the movements are being studied and even the eyes of the players are scrutinized.

"The preliminary study, made on the top notch players in the Denver PGA tournament, which included five ex-champions and the present champion, Vic Ghezzi, is very promising," says Joe Novak, Los Angeles pro and chairman of the PGA teaching program.

Payoff on Good Form

"Specifically, this data reveals that in golf, like in all other sports, the payoff is on good form. The players who got the highest ratings, after being studied in the qualifying round, went right on through to the later matches. Players with low ratings were eliminated early."

Novak's study showed this about the top-notch players:

A majority use the overlapping grip (little finger of the right hand overlapping the forefinger of the left).

A majority use the square

CRAIG WOOD
His three-quarter swing favored stance: toes on a line parallel to the line of direction, ball played opposite the left heel.

The average weight of drivers was 13½ ounces; their average length 43 inches.

They addressed the ball with their left arms in a comfortable, at ease position; with no stiffness or tension in their bodies. The majority use a firm grip with the left hand without tensing in any way.

Wins 300th Game

Bob Grove

After two failures, "Lefty" Bob Grove, 41-year-old hurler for Joe Cronin's Boston Red Sox, achieved his objective yesterday afternoon when he won his 300th game of his brilliant career. Grove defeated the Cleveland Indians 10 to 6.

"Old Mose" is the 12th pitcher to win 300 games or more. Other hurlers dating far back into the history of the game are Denton "Cy" Young, Walter Johnson, Grover Alexander, Christy Mathewson, Charles "Red" Nichols, Tim Lincecum, Charles Radbourne, Mickey Welch and Anthony Mulane.

Edward H. Foley, general counsel of the treasury, who signed the orders as acting secretary in the absence of Secretary Morgenthau, said they "froze all trade between the two countries."

The question of whether oil—vital to Japan's army, navy and industry—would continue to be shipped to Japan was not specifically mentioned in the White House order or any of the supplementary treasury orders.

The White House statement did, however, emphasize that a major objective of the order was to prevent any trade between the United States and Japan "harmful to national defense and American interest."

The American Petroleum Institute in New York declared that Japan imported 3,154,000 barrels of motor fuel, including 467,000 barrels of aviation gasoline from the United States in the six months ended last March 31.

Lightning Kills Germantown Man

Farmer Was in Hayloft When Bolt Struck

George Martell McKenzie, 45, World War veteran and widely known Germantown farmer, was instantly killed when struck by a bolt of lightning shortly after 4 o'clock Friday afternoon while he was in the hayloft of the barn of William Gronwald, well known farmer and auctioneer of Germantown.

The barn was destroyed by fire. Mr. McKenzie had gone to the Gronwald farm to assist in storing the hay crop. With him were Mr. Gronwald and Sherman Funk, who was operating the conveyor. McKenzie was alone in the hayloft at the time the lightning struck.

Gronwald and Funk were stunned by the shock but recovered in time to rescue the body of McKenzie from the blazing barn. The Germantown fire department was called, but the fire was beyond control.

Little Relief From Heat

Albany, N. Y., July 26 (AP)—Forecasts of a little less sunshine but about the same amount of sticky heat gave perspiring New Yorkers little hope today for any immediate relief after four days of high temperature. Cloudy skies with scattered showers were predicted for most of the state with a possibility that Sunday might be cooler.

Overcome by Heat

Ray Dugan was overcome by the intense heat about 6 o'clock Friday evening, and was removed to his home, 10 Newkirk avenue, in the police radio car by Officers Peter Camp and Kenneth Hyatt who had received a call over the radio to go to the corner of Newkirk and Hasbrouck avenue, where a man had collapsed.

Shortage of Doctors

Berlin, July 26 (AP)—Declaring that recent demands of the army have caused a shortage of physicians, the German press urged the public to call doctors only in urgent cases.

HOUSE OVERBOARD

Movers faced a tough job after this house fell off the timbers on which it was being hauled by trailer-truck from one location to another at White Plains. The mishap occurred just a block from the structure's destination.

A Navy Strategist

Walter Boyne, 12, of East St. Louis, Ill., tinkering with a model airplane experiment, has devised a plan to decoy destroyers protecting convoys away from their ships to allow a submarine to attack. He mailed it to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox with a borrowed stamp.

AERIAL COMMUTER

Peter M. Schweitzer (left) is said to be the first aerial commuter on regular commercial airlines. Each morning he takes a plane from New York to his office in Newark, N. J., and in the evening returns the same way in 15 minutes. He says the flights save him about 70 miles of driving.

GRAIN ELEVATOR SWEEP BY FIRE

Smoke rolls from a Chicago grain elevator after fire swept through the structure, situated amid a manufacturing and warehouse district. After a blast, presumably a dust explosion, grain cascaded from the six-story building, which had a 500,000 bushel capacity and contained principally government-owned corn and some oats.

Thousands of Jobs In New Upstate Defense Plants

Albany — New upstate defense plants, planned last year and rushed to completion, are now swinging into production, according to a June report by Milton O. Loynes, executive director of the Division of Placement and Unemployment Insurance. Thousands of workers have been taken on, and many thousands more will be hired before the end of the year.

Excerpts from the report are as follows: A large airplane plant in Buffalo is practically completed and 1,000 workers are already engaged. A new Elmira plant to produce airplane parts and cannons expects to hire another 1,000 during the summer and fall. A Schenectady plant producing tanks has added 1,000 in the last two months and will need an additional 500 soon. The Ilium arms plant has hired hundreds during the past month and will probably continue to hire in substantial volume.

The government's new aviation supply and repair depot at Rome, to cost about $14,000,000, and the $7,000,000 ammunition storage depot near Geneva will require many construction workers for the next twelve months.

New plants in the planning stage at Buffalo will ultimately add 12,000 to 15,000 workers beyond previous expectations. A large factory building for the production of optical equipment has been completed at Rochester and will house about 700 new employees. Many other plants are expanding by squeezing more workers onto present productive equipment through more intensive use of multiple shifts.

Buffalo and Schenectady are the most active centers in the expansion of employment. Most of the needed workers are being hired within the commuting areas of the factories to minimize the waste resulting from unnecessary migration.

The normal seasonal unemployment in the textile, shoe and garment trades has been much less than usual. In many plants no such unemployment has occurred and in some, new employees have been added. There is some fear that current production is exceeding consumption and that a resulting temporary contraction in employment may occur later in the year.

Shortages of material and resulting priorities will probably result in some lay-offs in the future but up to the present they have not had an important effect on the demand for labor. Among the large Upstate employers that will be affected are those producing refrigerators and automobile parts. Important producers of these products are located at Schenectady, Syracuse, Rochester, Lockport and Buffalo. Fortunately, most of the plants where such reductions may occur are also engaged on the work, which will probably be most workers laid off as a result of the curtailment of production.

The canning industry is entering its season of high employment. Thousands of workers will be needed. As many of those formerly employed in such plant prior years, now have steady work in defense industries, there is a large number of opportunity for new workers in the industry. Some fear that the labor is available in the canning would be inadequate to meet the demand as current reports indicate that many housewives students will take these temp jobs.
